Real Results: Rachel Zenzinger

In her single session as a State Senator, Rachel received bipartisan support on all eight of her bills, addressing issues in our local classrooms, protecting seniors, and creating an economy that works for all, not just those at the very top.

Rachel lives in Arvada, and works for a non-profit educational organization supporting teachers and principals.

If you have seen my opponent's attack ads, you have probably figured out that she is desperate to distract voters from her record as the most extreme kind of right-winger. On the other hand, my record of working across the aisle speaks for itself, and I pledge to continue listening and working for you. ”

An Honest Conversation with Rachel Zenzinger

I'm a mom and an educator.

Like all parents juggling a job and family, I often experience days when unexpected events derail my schedule. You've been there. Parent-teacher meetings, bill-paying, work pressures, elder care obligations all collide to force you to prioritize.

It's the same way in the Senate.

You need to find people who will help you get the job done for the families you represent. To me, that means working with colleagues across the political spectrum, looking past our differences so our families can enjoy better lives.

In the Colorado Senate, I will help get Real Results to improve your lives.

- When working people don't make enough to support their families, it means no new school supplies or keeping a car that needs to be replaced. Simply put, we need higher wages.
- When veterans can't get the job training or financial help they have earned, it means our military families struggle. Simply put, veterans deserve our support.
- When working people can't afford rising rents or a down payment on a home, they move out, taking their families and other assets with them. Simply put, we need affordable housing.
- When families struggle to save for college, it means kids give up the dream, or families sink into unmanageable debt. Simply put, college must be affordable.
